ABSTRACT

This study
1. There is a correlation between emotional divorce as women understand and self appreciation
2. There is a correlation between emotional divorce as women understand and some mental disorders such as: depression, anxiety and body image
3. There are significant differences between women who suffer from emotional divorce and women who are actually divorced based on self-esteem variable
4. There are significant differences between women who suffer from emotional divorce and women who are actually divorced in the presence of some mental disorders such as depression, anxiety and body image
5. There are significant differences between women who suffer from emotional divorce and women who are actually divorced with variance of some variables such as age, number of children and education level.

Results
1. There is no correlation between emotional divorce as women understand and self appreciation
2. There is no correlation between emotional divorce as women understand and some mental disorders such as: depression, anxiety, body image
3. There are significant differences between women who suffer from emotional divorce and women who are actually divorced based on self-esteem variable
4. There are significant differences between women who suffer from emotional divorce and women who are actually divorced in the presence of some mental disorders such as depression, anxiety and body image
5. There are significant differences between women who suffer from emotional divorce and women who are actually divorced with variance of some variables such as age, number of children and education level.