Interested in Egypt's rulers through the ages in securing the southern border of Egypt from any danger that comes from the south, it has focused on ancient Egypt built many fortresses in Nubia

It continued after the Muslim conquest of Egypt. Which indicates the presence of defensive fortifications in front of the southern border of Egypt, dating back to before the Fatimid state. After the establishment of the Fatimid dynasty in Egypt continued existence of a military garrison Fatimid staying permanently in the mouth of Aswan with weapons ready to save the gap

In spite of the friendly relations that Christian kingdom of Nubia collected Fatimid state, but the state of apathy prevailed between the two parties. And they took advantage of the fall of the Fatimid state and attacked the south of Egypt and especially the city of Aswan and captured its people

So it necessary to send a large campaign be led by his brother Turan Shah to stop this menace

That Turan Shah campaign Nubia was not the real cause of her search for the property of the Oaobien harboring the thought that Noordin in them out of Egypt, but the real reason the desire to cleanse the level and Nubia from the remains of the soldiers of the Fatimids of Sudanese. Also led to deadlock raids on the level of Nubia during the rule of the Ayyubid and the beginning of the State of the Marine Mamluks they attacked the king of Nubia Ali Aivab then Aswan, in the reign of the Mamluk Sultan Baybars Bunduqdari
