

Research Title	Electronic Pharmacies and Covid-19: Opportunities and Challenges- a field Study
Researcher Data:	Dr. Mohammed Kamal Ahmed Hassan – Fayoum University – Faculty of Arts – Department of Sociology - mka03@fayoum.edu.eg
Abstract	The current study aimed to identify the opportunities provided by electronic pharmacies to patients and consumers during the face of the emerging corona virus pandemic, As well as the challenges that faced patients and consumers and limited the effectiveness of these pharmacies, To achieve it, the study presented a question looking for to what extent electronic pharmacies provided many opportunities for patients and consumers while facing the pandemic of the new Corona, and what are the challenges that they faced and limited the effectiveness of these pharmacies? This study is part of the analytical studies based on its methodology for analyzing and explaining its problems on the comparative critical method, using the method of social survey in the sample of the selected sample of (400) residents of rural and urban Fayoum. Their results were extracted as part of a selection procedure of statistical treatments that were presented anatomically for quantitative data .The study found that that electronic pharmacies played a pivotal role during the emerging corona virus pandemic, as they reduced the rates of infection in the community, and the study also found that electronic pharmacies succeeded in providing many health services during the pandemic, especially for those with chronic diseases, and finally the study concluded that The sample members faced many medical, technological, informational, social and cultural challenges during their dealings with electronic pharmacies, which greatly limited their effectiveness.
Key Words	Electronic Pharmacies- Covid-19
Journal Name	Journal of the faculty of Arts, faculty of Arts, Fayoum University.
Publishing date	Volume 12- Issue 2 - July – 2020.