

“Functional and Structural Constraints of the Correlation between Permanence and Occurrence – A Cognitive Approach to Grammatical Theory.”

Published in: Journal of Arabic Sciences – Department of Arabic Language, Faculty of Arts, Beni Suef University,
Vol. 3, No. 5, January–June 2023.

Abstact:

This study attempted to search in the cognitive aspect that governs the performance of the Arabic speaker, and reveals the depth of thinking in the grammatical heritage, by standing at a Presumptions of speech, which is the presumption of constant and renewal; Because of its functional and structural importance, it helped to elucidate the semantics of texts and achieve communication, and revealed the awareness of our ancient scholars of the importance of the communicative function in interpreting grammatical phenomena and deriving rulings regulating them. Hence, this study came in an introduction that dealt with the nature of the topic, its objectives, the research plan and methodology, and two topics; One of them: the functional limitations of the presumption of constant and renewal, and the other: the Synthetic limitations of the presumption of constant and renewal, then the research was appended with a conclusion in which the most important results that were reached were noted.

Keywords: limitations, functional, Synthetic, constant, renewal, cognitive.