

The impact of contemporary legal conditions on marriage contracts: a comparative jurisprudential study

Research summary:

This study falls under the category of sales transactions, which is based on the principle that "the default ruling in transactions is permissibility." This principle ensures the orderly function of human society while maintaining the overarching objectives of Islamic legislation and specific legal evidences. Additionally, it considers human customs, emerging issues, and widespread practices in societies.

In this research, the study examines the jurisprudential rulings related to returning sold goods after a valid sales contract has been executed. It specifically elaborates on:

- The rulings on returning sold goods due to commercial promotion by the seller or producer. •
- The rulings on returning sold goods due to defects that arise in the purchased item. •
- The rulings on returning sold goods due to the regret of one of the contracting parties ("Iqalah"). •

Final Conclusion:

All praise is due to Allah, the Lord of all worlds.
