

A proposal to overcome cyber-bullying in basic education schools in the Arab Republic of Egypt in the light of the experiences of Australia, Finland and the United States of America

Abstract:

The means of communications have developed in the last period; therefore, the societies have become open environments. The increased use of social communication means, which have made communities one room, enables individuals to communicate with each other easily, quickly and at the lowest cost. However, of all these advantages it has some disadvantages. The purpose of this research is to define the cyberbullying concept and its characteristics and how it be treated in Australia, Finland and the United States of America in order to formulate a proposed preview to confront this type of violence in Egypt.
