ABSTRACT

This study is entitled "Installation Aspects in poetry of yosef Al-nabhany as Agrammatical and Semantic Study". It studies the syntactic deviation in his poetry collection;" Pearls of the Prophet Praise Poems". It tries to detect the role of syntactic deviation in providing the structure with its intended meaning, to demonstrate the role of sentence structure in the specialty of poetic language and to discover the ideal image of what the poet means. Different syntactic deviations in the sentence structure change it from one meaning to another and at the same time keep its basic structure. These syntactic deviations are inversion, omission, negation and questioning. The language is a system and each system has its constants and variants; the constants are permanent indispensable frameworks and the system cannot be found without those constants and the variants are changeable and they are subject to certain circumstances that lead to their convert according to the frames of constants and their rules. This structural linguistic system has syntactic deviations that do not deviate away from syntactic rule. Rather, it is a change in the linguistic structure which becomes not identical to the basic structure; this way is used to convey a meaning achieved only through this change. This research is important because it tries to highlight the role syntactic meaning in providing the structure with its main meaning and the role of sentence structure in showing the genius of Yusuf Al Nabhani. This is achieved through understanding the simple structure of the Arabic sentence, demonstrating how to build its elements, showing the rules of that structure as it is one of the poetic structure's basics and using it in the intended significance.
